

Our four tips for joining Hutchinson

We make it possible

How should you write your resume?

Your resume should be concise and feature examples of your real-life achievements to give a clear insight into your career path and profile.

Remember to highlight your non-work activities which reflect the other skills that are just as useful to your career development.

A little touch of originality can also help your resume stand out from the rest.

Examine and learn about the company

Before your interview, take the time to look at all the details in the job description and find out more about our Group, since this background information will ensure a more meaningful, personal and impactful discussion.

The interview should enable both sides to learn more about each other and confirm our desire to work together.

Bear in mind that this is a pre-interview. The aim is to confirm that you possess the skills required for the position, as well as your language proficiency and level of mobility.

Make your profile stand out

Make the most of your previous experience. Which of your qualities are a perfect match for the type of position that you are applying for within our company?

Illustrate your experience with details about your actual achievements and the projects that you have led, and provide figures.

Your interview should be structured and stimulating, but at the same time it should be a pleasant experience for discussing with the interviewer.

Your integration

We take special care when designing your onboarding induction program, since it must be tailored to your specific position.

Whatever your duties, it is important to define your objectives and priorities with your manager.

It is also an opportunity to discuss the support that you will need to succeed in your role and become fully operational.
